Dear Mr. Quigley:

John Aungst forwarded the photograph you sent him to me. I am having it copied and should be able to get it back to you by the end of May (my photographer is a bit slow). I am quite sure that the house you sent me is the one by Wilson Eyre. It is always great fun for me to discover another one by him. In fact, it is very much like the Eyre house on which I did my Master's Thesis (the Freer House, Detroit, Michigan--almost the same date as the Reynolds house). You mentioned that you had other photographs. Would it be possible to borrow those and have them copied? Do you have any interior views? I am working with another scholar on a monograph on the architect and such things are enormously helpful.

Thank you for your help. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Betsy Fahlman

Dear Mr. Quigley:

I must apologize for the unfortunate delay in the return of your photograph. I am usually quite prompt in getting things like this back. My photographer left school for the summer without having copied the photograph, and the combination with the fact that I was away for the entire summer meant that I had to locate another photographer on my return. He has just finished the task and I am now returning it to you with my thanks. It was an enormous addition to our research, particularly since no one had previously located a view of your grandfather's house in Lancaster. It interested me particularly as it was very much like the house of Charles Lang Freer in Detroit (of the Freer Gallery fame) on which I wrote my Master's thesis.

Thank you for your patience in awaiting the return of the photograph and your generosity in lending it in the first place.

Sincerely,

Betsy Fahlman
